When you're dating a guy you really like, you can start dreaming and fantasizing about calling him your boyfriend one day. But before you decide to promote him to friend status, how can you be sure if he's really the stuff guy after all? In order to determine if it's a bf that you really want and deserve, it's important to be able to recognize the seven key traits that make any friend a great friend. Before you decide what your guy stuff is, you should take a moment to think about your conversation style and communication skills and techniques as a couple. Does your boyfriend really listen to what you have to say? Is he present at the moment with you, or will you find that he is distracted, that you have to repeat yourself, and that you often compete for his full and close attention? When a guy is really a stuff guy, it means he's mature enough to focus his attention on you and be a great listener. And whether it's lending an ear or shoulder to cry, its ability to listen to you, understand you, empathize with you, and support you with all the necessary qualities in another. On a scale of one to ten, how does your boyfriend feel about you? If he is one of those people who is respectful, kind and attentive, he should definitely be considered a different material. However, if it tends to put you down, treat you with contempt, or act in a controlling or jealous manner from time to time, this guy does not respect you and is certainly not worthy of you or your time. Mutual respect is a key component of a happy, healthy and long-term relationship, and if it doesn't respect you, it doesn't deserve you. In order for a person to be a friend of the material, he must work to earn your trust. For example, if he is reliable, completely honest with you, and opens up about different aspects of his life and his past, he actually shows you that he wants to build a deeper connection. When a guy chooses to fully let you in and allows himself to be completely vulnerable around you, it is the person who is worth raising for the status of a friend. Being able to trust a guy with your heart is an important step, and when he is emotionally open and accessible to you and can be counted on, it makes it easier for you to see that it is worth calling your boyfriend. Is your boyfriend doing everything he can to do a favor for you and hold you in his arms? When a person puts a high priority on your happiness and finds different ways, big and small, to bring a smile to your face, he is definitely a material guy. When a person is really interested in you and devoted to you, he will do his best to make your life better, happier and easier. If it surprises you with movie tickets by showing a helping hand to fix a broken computer, or going the extra mile for you to pick up he's definitely interested in being with you in the long run. In order for you to believe that your man to be a friend of the material, it is important to consider his words and his when it comes to you and your accomplishments. When a person really has your back, prides himself on what you have achieved (and will achieve) and your greatest lawyer and loyal supporter, it is definitely worth promoting the boyfriend hood. On the other hand, if he is intimidated by your success, does not see you as equal, and should always be the focus of attention regardless of the circumstances, he is certainly not a friend of the material or even a friend of the material. Are you your real me when you're with this guy? If you're wondering if your man is a guy of stuff, it's important to look inside and think about how you act when you're together. If you can be your true self around it and not hold back in any way, feign interests, or play a role or role, then he certainly deserves to be your boyfriend. However, if you are not comfortable around it or able to be the person you really are when you are together, then this is not the person for you. In order to have long-term potential, it is imperative that you and your boyfriend talk in the short term about what you want in a relationship. For example, while you may think that your person is a guy of material, he may actually be seeking to have an open relationship or something much less serious than what you want at this point in your life. If you want to avoid future grief, you should sit down together and discuss your goals and what you both want to go forward before you decide to call him your boyfriend. Pull over! You have to get away from these abusive relationships. And you're going to get it. But you don't have to use the other guy as an escape route. What you have to do, and quickly, is call victim support on 0845 3030 900. They will forever take you to a local counselor who will help you safely get out of this evil situation. Then - just as vitally important - learn to think highly of yourself and know that you deserve gentle treatment. You should never, ever again allow yourself into a violent relationship. Or the mistake of abuse and fear for love. This content is created and supported by a third party and is imported to this page to help users provide their email addresses.
